THE

TRIMMER,

HIS

FRIENDLY DEBATE

WITH THE

OBSERVATOR

UNIFORMITY;

Rendition of Charters, the House of Commons, not a House of Courtiers; and twenty things more, not worth the Rehearsal in a Title-Page.

Though it be the Common Policy of some Authors or Booksellers to Wheedle Men in to th' Exchange of Money for Books, by putting more in the Title-Page, then you shall find in the Book; and (like the Observator) more in the Contents then in the Chapter.

LONDON,

Printed for R. Hall; And sold by most Booksellers. 1683.

TO THE

READER,

IF any one be inquisitive to know who comes here? (and under the guise of a Trimmer) I answer, a Friend, a Friend to his Country, as are all those, and only those that are Loyal to the King; and because the Observator also appears (only) in Masquerade, I also thus muffle up my self in the dark, and go a-mumming with him.

And indeed I may well be loth to be apprehended, and known, and taken in such Company. where gravity itself may well blush to be seen with such a Scaramucchio.

Not that I need be afraid, or asham'd at any thing here writ, nor that I want a lawful Commission to call him (thus) to account, since the Law of God, the Law of Nature, Self-preservation, and the Common Law of Mankind, gives every man a Letter of Mart against the Common-Picqueroon of all good mens reputations.

And if I have indulg'd an humour that may sometimes (possibly) seem Picquant and Eager, the malignity of the humour to be corrected, may require (at least) indempnity. Besides the Observator has so coated himself in his own dirt, that there's no coming at him, till he be scrap't.

For

For Spies ( or Obſervators ) very ſubtlely walk Incognito, and with a dark Lanthorn (like Faux) in diſguiſe; and though alwaies ready to give fire to the Train of their own laying, to blow up whom they liſt, and when they liſt, yet no body can certainly tell who hurts them; they ſhoot in the dark, and with white-powder, doing Execution, and yet not betray'd by the report.

So that I am forc't to bring him to light,& unhood him ſometimes by ſome ( otherwiſe unwelcome ) Periphraſis.

Yet can no man imagine that I or any man ſhould be overforward to attack ſuch an Hydra, that decollate his venom never ſo dextrouſly, and aſſuredly, yet the next week he ſhall ſtill perk up his head anew, ſo long as he has any miſchief to exert.

— Iram atque animos ex crimine ſumit.

Beſides, There is no conquering an Ape, all Correction is loſt upon him, for laſh him, and ſlaſh him never ſo tightly for his luſtful Pranks, and miſchievous Gambols, yet

He'le turn up his Scut, and ſnear in your Face;
With an impudent Grin, and a learing Grimace.

THE TRIMMER, HIS FRIENDLY DEBATE WITH THE OBSERVATOR.

CHAP. I.

Trim. NOW, we have begun to Parley, I see some blooming hopes of a Peace betwixt us, at least a Truce:

Obs. Never, never, I am against all Peace with Whigs, Trimmers, or Dissenters; and am only for Execution, Execution——with a firm, hardy, and unalterable determination. Obs. 269. Jan. 10. 1682.

Trim. Are you not capable of any mitigation, nor moderation?

Obs. No; no; speak not a word on't; I have (indeed, long ago) hung out the White-flag, (then was then, and now is now; then was your time of Treaty;) but, now like Tamberlain, I hang out nothing but the Blood-red Flag.

Trim. Notwithstanding which, I am (still) of opinion that your rage might be mortified, and by my hand too; at least moderated, or mitigated.

Obs. What? Dost thou think that my Ring-worm Observation's inveterated now to a Tetter, can be corrected with a little gall-less Ink, and a blunt Pen?

Trim. It is not impossible, if a man could think it worth his while: or, if it were proper to be grave with a Buffoon.

Obs. Then you take the Observator (on whose vigilance, and strenuous sedulity depends the publick Peace) to be but a Mimick in your esteem.

Trim. I think it is as needless as ridiculous to talk seriously to an Ape; and he that does it, is the greater Ape of the two; and yet, to suffer the mischievous Ape, to play his Gambols uncorrected, what patience or wisdom can endure it? For so noysome and offensive are some Animals to humane kind, that it concerns all mankind to get quit of the Annoyance, with as speedy a riddance and dispatch as may be, by any lawful means, how great soever be the drudgery.

Obs. Then why do you undertake such a drudgery?

Trim. I confess there is no credit in the Rancounter, where the victory deserves pardon (only;) no Triumph.

Obs. Then you doubt not the victory be like.

Trim. Victory? I attempt none over thee, more then (a Scavinger does) over the Kennel; it is an employment more easy, and necessary, then creditable; and he that (for publick-good) stoops to it, cannot possibly do it without dirtying his fingers, be he never so warily cleanly. Besides, there is in an Observator, such a concurrence of odd and sinister qualities, that it is some difficulty to treat him suitably, and yet effectually.

Obs. Why so? Am I a man of such Cross-purposes?

Trim.

Trim. Let the Company judge; for, treat a Monky seriously, and correct him never so effectually, and he'le only fleer at you; and on the other hand, treat him suitably (that is) Apishly, and the By-standers will laugh at both; the best way is to put a chain about the loins of the wanton Baboon, and tie him up from further harm.

Obs. And in the interim, you will shew a good reason for it.

Trim. As good reason (at least) as you shew for execution, execution of all Trimmers, and Dissenters, men of as good conscience, and merit (surely) as your good Worship. For God and Nature, Justice and Reason, Self-preservation, and the common-law of mankind have given every Man a License to smite a Viper, or a Mad-Dog, that foams out nothing but rage, and ruine to all he can snap at, biting (like mad) all that comes in his way, as long, and as far as his feeble Legs, and old Teeth will permit him; and when they fail, still he howls out, Execution, Execution---- will any man in his wits stop that charitable hand, that will maul the old Cur?

Obs. You make a very Beast of me; the worst of Beasts? Viper? Mad old Cur? You begin to be good Company; but is not this too reflecting, rude and Personal?

Obs. 273. Trim. It is Just and Personal; for he that unmans himself by losing all sense of humanity, spitting fire, vomiting Daggers and Knives, disgorging Halters, as fast as a Jugler does Ribbons, and breathing flames, and Execution, Execution, with a firm, hardy, and unalterable determination, howling against all moderation, mitigation, &c. makes a beast of himself, and by his Barbarity turns Salvage.

Obs. Have you any Commission to use me thus?

Trim. Yes; the Commission is made in nature, and given to all; is it not lawful to wipe off the dirt, that rude hands shall throw at any mans face? at least, more lawful then to asperse and calumniate? That man that turns Satyr, discovers thereby (like the Devil, who also like a Satyr is pourtrayed with) his Cloven-feet; every man blesses himself from him: And therefore a Satyr is also painted with wrinkled Horns; that as he gores every man, so every man thinks it lawful to have a fling at him? A Commission (quoth he?) to chastise an old Apish mischievously mad Observator, that like a Salvage-Indian, runs a muck, killing all he can come at, till some lucky hand knock the desperate villain down, and so prevent Execution, Execution, with which he plagued mankind, with a firm, hardy, and unalterable determination. Surely the Law and Justice that permits you to asperse men with your false Colours, and dirt of your own invention, and scraping up against me a Trimmer, and all Trimmers for my sake, in your weekly and dayly Pamphlets, cannot in Equity or Justice keep two scales, and two measures, one to buy by, and another to sell by; one Wincheſter-measure, another Rumford; one for favour, and affection, another for disaffection; one for an Observator, another for a Trimmer, one for a Tory--non--con--- another for a Whig--non--con--- one for an erroneous Conscience, another for him that has none at all. Justice should be blind, as well as keep just weights and measures; Justice, true Justice have no respect of Persons, know not their own Sons (ay, marry, (Sirs!) who does?) nor yet their own Masters, nor friends in Judgment; for they that have but one Ear open, deserve to be crop't, and to lose both. They should not be like the Scotch-Prophet, who undertook certainly to Divine, and foretel at any time in any Law-Suit, which side would be worsted, long before tryal; but the Fawse Loune took aim (like crafty Astrologers) from answers to some previous questions, which alwaies guided, and directed his Divination, wherein he seldom or never did err: enquiring first, (thus) Ken ye wha is the Whig and wha is the Tory? And accordingly gave Judgment for Plaintiff or Defendant, as the Judges (he knew) were inclined; Judge Hales is dead.

Obs. Ay, long ago, but his place is not empty.

Trim. Such places seldom stand long empty, may they for ever be well-fill'd, & then Justice will not be severe against a necessary Apology, and yet connive at an Observator that bespatters Trimmers with all the blood shed in Eng. Scot. and Irel. ascribing it ('tis Strange) to the moderating, mitigating, abating &c. Councils of Trimmers.

Obs. What shameless villain could have so little modesty, or so little sense to ascribe such dismal events to be the effects of moderation, and mitigation; 'tis too much nonsense for so ingenuous an Observator to be guilty of it.

Trim. I cannot help that, but if I should take notice of all your escapes, I should be more voluminous then Varro; besides, since your weekly, and sometimes dayly Observations has repleniſht the world, they need no more Bumfodder this seven years, I'le maintain it. Therefore I'le neither offend my self, nor my Reader, with turning my head further back (to look upon such nasty Excrements of your Brain) then from January 10. 1682. Obſ. N. 269. where you aſcribe not only all the Blood ſhed for 40 long years, and upwards, to the moderating and mitigating Councils of Trimmers, but particularly alſo the death of the Earl of Strafford, and the murther of the late King is filed to the ſame account.

Obſ. I remember no ſuch matter.

Trim. A man of your talent needs a better memory, but you did ſay ſo.

Obſ. Where?

Trim. I have told you, in Obſ. n. 269. What was it but trimming Councils that ruined the late King, &c.

Obſ. Go on.

Trim. Ay, that would be wiſe work, to reprint your Obſervator, when any man may have them at the upper end of Holborn for two pence a Baſhel. Do you not ſay, How was all this brought about? By moderating (you anſwer) mitigating, qualifying, abating, promiſing, undertaking, flattering, diſtinguiſhing, inſinuating, expoſtulating, importuning, ſupplicating, whining, deploring, deſponding, &c. in caſes where there was no way left to preſerve the Publick but Execution, Execution, with a firm, hardy, and unalterable determination.

Obſ. Nay, If I have ſaid it, I'le ſtand to it, my Pen never undertook any thing but it carried it.

Trim. The wrong way, commonly. Will you promiſe not to laugh at me, if I be a little ſericus with ſuch a Scarramuchio?

Obſ. Speak your pleaſure with the ſame liberty that I have taken.

Trim. If I ſhould ſay, Let your moderation be known unto all men, I ſhould too gravely refel your Buffoonry; but prethee tel me ſoberly, (if thou canſt be ſober) Did ever Chriſt, or his bleſſed Apoſtles breath nothing but Execution, Execution? Did they not conquer the ſalvage World with meekneſs, moderation and mitigation, mildly teaching the neareſt way to Heaven, and to Temperance, Sobriety, Meekneſs, Piety, the only way thither; and the only way to Peace and Happineſs in this World, as well as in another World?

Obſ. I cannot deny it.

Trim. Then (prethee) why doſt thou pretend to be more concerned for mens temporal and eternal welfare than they are themſelves?

Obſ. I would but guide them, and if they will not follow, they know what follows, and let them take what follows.

Trim. Ay, ay, ſo let them; Execution, let them have it, firmly and inalterably, till the Hang-men be tir'd and gorg'd till they vomit blood again, and ſpue like a Horſeleech, or like that horrid French King, (that great perſecutor of the Proteſtants) that died bloody all over; his blood could not by any Art be ſtop'd, but guſht out at Mouth, Eyes, Noſe, Ears, and all the other holes in his Body, after his Pariſian Maſſacre. And yet Atheiſts and Perſecutors attribute this to chance, when the finger of God was ſo viſible; (ſo did Iannes and Iambres, till at laſt, to their confuſion, they were convinced.) This was the end of that Charles the 9th of France, who viewing the dead Carkaſſes of his Proteſtant Subjects, that lay unburied after the Pariſian Maſſacre, and amongſt the reſt, the dead Body of the Admiral of France. Oh! (ſaid he) quam ſuaviter olet cadaver inimici? How pleaſant is the ſmell of an Enemies corps? So the Queen Mother of Scotland beholding the dead Bodies of her Proteſtant Subjects, (whom ſhe had ſlain in battle) ſaid, ſhe never ſaw a finer piece of Tapeſtry in her Life. But theſe Horſeleeches lived by blood, and by blood they died.

Obſ. Ay, but we are not for blood, for killing Men for Religion.

Trim. A good reaſon why, you cannot, becauſe the Writ de Hæretico comburendo is null and void: But was there not ways to bring a Cranmer to death for pretence of Treaſon, when Hereſie could not do it? And will any man that makes no Conſcience to take my purſe, ſcruple to knock me in the head, if he have opportunity. All Perſecutors, like all Dogs, are all of a kind, though ſome are of leſs growth and ſtrength than others; a peeviſh curſt Curr would rend and tear like a Maſtiff, or an Iriſh-Greyhound, if it had the power, which makes me think of Sir George Blage, one of King Henry the 8th's Bed-chamber, and in whom the King took great complacence and delight; for Sir George was moſt pleaſantly facetious, and Company for a Prince, but he was a true Proteſtant in the very heart of him, and conſequently did no very good Offices to the King (the Biſhops thought) in reference to them and their Eccleſiaſtical ways; but to be revenged (an Execution, that they ſeldom adjourned longer than till the Gallows was ſet up, and the Halter and Hang-men ready, good Men!) they got Sr. George into their Spiritual Courts, and condemned him forthwith for Hereſie, (hoping to diſpatch him before the King ſhould have notice) and juſt as they had turned him ever to the ſecular Power, only to burn him a little to aſhes, (tender hearts) unluckily came the Kings Pardon, and ſpoiled the ſport, when Sir George coming to thank the King for his grace, Ah, my Pig! (quoth the King, for ſo he uſed to call him) yea, ſaith Sir George, but if your Majeſty had not been better to me than the Biſhops, your Pig had been roaſted before this time. And if the Governours had followed the Execution, Execution, to which (like a Malepert Incendiary) you tutor them, our buſineſs had been done by this time, either roaſted or raw. Thus you are become the Publick Bellows, daily kindling and blowing up the Coals of Diſſention keeping up Differences, and Parties, and Animoſities, that would lie dead if Hodge had bread.

CHAP. II.

Obſ. WHy am I thus neglected then? no preferment ſtirring a days?

Trim. Preferment? Yes, for want whereof, you have under my name, and upon my back, like a diſcontented Pedant, whipt and ſlaſht men in place and Power (theſe two months) as men that are ſo ignorant as to be ſo ſtupid, as to be ſo dull, as not to ſee your merit, and how well you have deſerved of the publick.

Obſ. Such men (as you ſpeak of) like your ſelf, are crept up into High places and Preferments, and not only ſo, but (as if you were alſo the very Pimps to preferment,) hold the door, ſtrutting it againſt better Men than your ſelves, Men that have been always Loyal, always conſtant; 'tis theſe Trimmers that know my merit and Loyalty ſo well, that their knowledg of it has undone me; they know I am too honeſt for ſome Courts, and too plain a Obſ. n. 272. dealer, which (as I told you lately) has undone me.

Trim. Thou Loyal and conſtant? yes, thou waſt always loyal to White-hall; and very complacent to old Oliver, to humour and oblige him, with the only talent you can glory in, or Oliver took delight in, namely, your Fiddle-ſticks; thou art loyal and conſtant to White-hall, whoever is the occupant, and in poſſeſſion, right or wrong.

Obſ. n. 268. Obſ. Did not I give you a Liſt (the other day) of thoſe Names that have been always loyal, always conſtant; tri'd men, and never deceived a truſt, never warp'd from their duty, never doubled nor faltred in the worſt times?

Trim. Yes, you did, I remember by this token, that your own dear ſelf was the Foreman impanelled in the Inqueſt, with an Aſteriſm, or hand in the margent overagainſt it, and underneath theſe words (which I ſuppoſe you ſtole out of the Ring Mrs. Betty gave you) when this you ſee, remember me; ſure you live amongſt bad neighbours, that you are glad (thus) to be your own Trumpet, Mr. Nobs---

Obſ. Trimmer, thou never ſpok'ſt a truer word in thy Life; a company of dull Rogues, they ſee not the dimenſions and goodly ſize of a man of parts; ſomtimes even at Sam's Coffee-houſe the dull-Crapes will make a half-grin, when they meet with a good jeaſt and witty in my Obſervations, whileſt others laugh at them for laughing at that which (they ſay) is neither witty nor a jeaſt; and when I break as good a jeaſt as any in the Three Kingdoms, Ay dad, they ſay it is no more worth the laughing at, than if I had broke wind, (ſaving your preſence) calling me but the very Crackf--- of the Nation.

Trim. They abuſe their own wit that ſuſpect yours.

Obſ. Ay dad, Trimmer, I begin to love thee now for that very word, and if all the men in Place and Power, whom I have perſecuted ſo long under your vizzard, had but your Brains and Eyes in their Skulls, I had not thus long been neglected, and forc'd to write for Bread, my daily Bread ſomtimes; and dad I have deſerved better of the publick.

Trim. And no doubt but you will be advanced in good time, according to your deſerts.

Obſ. So I have hoped long, indeed, but I have lived upon hopes till I am almoſt ſtarved.

Trim. Why do you not chaſtiſe the Government for being ſuch a negligent blind Government, as not to diſcern the pregnancy of your parts, the conſtancy of your Loyalty, and the great uſe and need they have of you?

Obſ.

Obſ. Is that (now) to do? ſure thou doſt not read, at leaſt, not heed my Obſervations; have I not rendred the great ones therefore (this 2 or 3 months) a ſort of hollow-friends to the Government, calling them Trimmers; ay dad, I have paid them off, and have charg'd them with no leſs then the murther of the late King, the death of the Earl of Strafford, the Maſſacre in Ireland, nay, the only cauſe of all the blood and ruine in the three Kingdoms for above theſe forty years? I have mauld them E dad, and reveng'd my ſelf upon them ſufficiently, (I think,) inconſiderate men; they might have conſider'd me ſooner; E dad, I trounc't them, for their moderating, and mitigating councils, that ruin'd all, when nothing but bold, and hardy Execution, Execution can ſave us; and a firm, hardy, and unalterable determination. Obſ. n. 269. Obſ. n. 269.

Trim. And for which you muſt endure my ſeverer laſh by and by; why? Thou more then Bedlamer! was ever moderation, mercy or mitigation, or Councils compounded of ſuch Ingredients, guilty of ſo much blood and ruine? I thought it had been the bloody Iriſh, and Papiſts, that were the cauſe of the bloody Maſſacre in Ireland, and alſo the Inſtruments thereof. Obſ. Jan. 10. n. 269.

Obſ. The Trimmers, E dad; I have ſaid it;

Trim. Yes, you have ſaid it, and printed it too; and if it had not been to undeceive you (for I ſuppoſe there is not a man in the world believes it, except your dear ſelf, and perhaps not your ſelf neither) I had not vouchſaf't to humble my ſelf ſo much to cenſure, as to be ſeen in ſuch company; but now, that my hand is in, i'le make you come on the publick-ſtage, (now that I have got you on to my own ground) as often as I liſt, (juſt as you have uſed me (theſe 2 months) and all Trimmers for my ſake, flaſhing us in Publick, in ſpight of our teeth, and under the name of Trimmers, have expoſed men in Place and Power, to Coffee-houſe-chat, and laughter, moſt ſawcily (all the Kingdom over,) in revenge of their ſlighting you, and your ſullied Petitions for Preferment; for which I will chaſtiſe you Nobs--- before I have done; indeed, I muſt, I will; come, Hot-cockles! you muſt (now) lie down in your Turn. Obſ. n. 269.

Obſ. Hold, Sir, hold! E dad, I do not like you at firſt, you ſeem to have dogged, hard Vulcan's hand, this muſt not be ſuffered, nor will the Government ſuffer a man of my Loyalty to be ſmitten in earneſt, upon pretence of Hot-cockles ſport, or a Chriſtmas-game:

Trim. Why! Does the Government think themſelves ſo much concern'd in you, and for you, as not to ſuffer more true Loyalty, then any Tories heart or head was ever capable of, to wipe off that blood & guilt, which (it has quietly ſuffer'd you (without check or rebuke) to throw upon all that has neglected, or diſcontented you, or that ſtands in your way, only becauſe you are hungry, or angry.

Obſ. It is not the Government that can be an Enemy to Nobs--- it knows it's own intereſt too well; neglect Nobs, and neglect its ſelf.

Trim. Who (then) has wanger'd thee? dear heart!

Obſ. The Trimmers, hollow friends to the Government, and hollow hearts that yet are got too near the head, 'tis theſe that I have ſo publickly chaſtiz'd, and whipt them for their pains, on the publick-ſtage, 'tis theſe on whom I can never be ſufficiently reveng'd; for they know if I were in play, they muſt ſit out, and be by-ſtanders; I am ſo loyal, and have been ſo faithful all along, and ſincere, E dad, this plain-dealing has undone me; 'tis cogging, lying, flattering Sycophants that carry it too often, Ay dad, I know where.

Trim. Nay, you do not ſtick to tell us where, you know the place where you woo'd the Uſurper with your only Talent, that you knew he lik't, your Fiddle.

Obſ. This is old, and ſhould not be again ript up: it has kept me under all along, and has been oft dung in my Teeth.

Trim. Ay, and will be, when impudent men, (ſuch as you Nobs,) will run away with all the great Loyalty and conſtancy, the Neighbourhood are up, and preſently in purſuit, (as after a man that runs away with a great bundle under his Cloaths) apt to cry, ſtop Thief, thinking themſelves rob'd, and therefore will make bold to ſearch him, and enquire whether he came honeſtly by it.

CHAP. III.

Obſ. CAn any man deny my Loyalty, when I have told them ſo often (in Print) that I had like to have been hanged for being loyal, at Lynn Regis, in the late Wars.

Trim. For being loyal ſay you? was it not for being an Obſervator?

Obſ. It was for being taken as a ſpy (or Obſervator) in the Parliaments Garriſon.

Trim. A ſpye (that comes under colour of a friend to betray) is always hang'd up (by all ſides, by the Law of Arms.) Men give fair quarter to a fair and open Enemy, but ſeldom or never ſpare an Obſervator, or (to uſe your own word) a Spye: But if you had ſwung for it, what cauſe would all mankind have had to bemoan the loſs of ſuch an harmonious Fidler? As cruel Nero apprehended his death would therefore be lamented, whileſt all mankind joyed in the deſerved death of the bloody and treacherous Monſter of Men, who took delight in nothing ſo much as in Execution, Execution, with a firm, hardy and unalterable determination.

Obſ. But I was a ſpye on the right ſide.

Trim. We'le talk of that anon. In the interim, What kind of Preferment would you have?

Obſ. Any place of Honour, Command, Authority, and Profit, eſpecially this laſt, for my Age requires Eaſe, and my merits ought to be paid: The State is much in my debt.

Trim. I hope, your Arrears will all be paid to a farthing at laſt.

Obſ. In the interim, here I ſigh, and here for bread I write, and E dad the wits do but jear me for my pains; nay, a conſiderable Lady (a She-trimmer) could ſay that I ſcribble for Bread, but E dad I paid her off, and hit her home, E dad, into the very belly of her, E dad, ſaying, have me recommended to her, we are ſo alike, for both of us (like other Monkies) ſhow tricks, and play tricks, and provide for the Belly; E dad, I think it was a good jeaſt; and yet the Rogues ſay, I grow dull.

Obſ. n. 265.

Trim. Let ſuch feel the acuteneſs of your wit, and make them ſmart for it, if they queſtion the ſharpneſs of your pen and ſtile.

Obſ. Ay, Ay, but my very acquaintance alſo begin to give it out that I am dull; now I am the furtheſt from it in the whole World, E dad, but only they think ſo, becauſe I can ſay nothing.

Trim. To the purpoſe.

Obſ. E dad, let a man write never ſo well, there are now a days a ſort of perſons they call Criticks, that E dad have no more wit in them than ſo many Hobby-Horſes; but they'le laugh you (Sir,) and find fault, and cenſure things that, E dad, I am ſure they are not able to do themſelves. A ſort of envious perſons, that emulate the glories of Perſons of parts, and think to build their fame by calumniating of perſons that, ay dad, to my knowledge of all perſons in the world, are in Nature the perſons that do as much deſpiſe all that as--------

Trim. Hold, hold! enough! I know this has been your language and almoſt your very words (theſe two months) againſt the perſons that have deſpiſed and neglected you, and indeed you are but a Plagyary for your pains: They are the very words of Mr. Bayes in the Rehearſal.

Obſ. I cannot tell that; they are my own ſentiments, and natural; good wits may jump; but whether Bayes ſtole it from me, or I from him, what's this in excuſe of the Hollow-Trimmers, that have neglected and deſpiſed my Loyalty and Conſtancy, ſo long (hitherto) unrewarded?

Trim. You were made Overſeer of the Preſs.

Obſ. Piſh, what's to be got by that?

Trim. A good job (you know) ſomtimes,

Obſ. Trimmer, No more of that, if thou loveſt me.

Trim. What is it (then) you would have me get for you?

Obſ. A place, a place, an Office! get me ſome place of Worſhip, and Authority, however Profit.

Trim.

Trim. For what cauſe ?

Obſ. For my old Loyalty, and for my watchings and toils; daily and nightly watchings and wardings (together with Honeſt Nat. Iriſh Nat. Loyal Nat.) how have we watcht and warded ne Reſpublica detrimentum capiat, and all for nothing?

Trim. Yes; you have already got a Priſon, Poverty, or a Pillory for your pains.

Obſ. E dad, 'tis true: the world is an ungrateful world, a blind world, they neither diſcern Men of worth, nor pay them to their value.

Trim. Yes, Nat. was paid off.

Obſ. Piſh! now you jear; he was indeed paid, poor Nat. poor wretch, poor Tory, poor Iriſh-tory, poor Curr.

Trim. That is the worſt of Tories.

Obſ. No, your Iriſh Tory is the trueſt Tory.

Trim. And the great Grandſire of Tories, and the Godfather of all true Engliſh Tories, and gave them their name; but how ſhall we know an Iriſh or Engliſh Tory from a Whigg?

Obſ. A great many ways, for they are almoſt as contrary as Heaven and Hell, Light and Darkneſs.

Your Whigg never ſwears, or if he does, 'tis ſome dwindling Oath, (as) by my truly; whereas your true Tory-Boy lets fly no mouth Granado's, but ſuch as fills the bore, damme, ſink me, Hell and Damnation, God bleſs the King, he ſwears, and the Duke of York, and dam the Whiggs and the D. of M. ſtill interchanging Huzza's and Curſes till his drink make him quiet, (that is) aſleep.

Trim. What elſe?

Obſ. Your true Tory gets more by curſing, than the other by praying; yet both preferred, one to Command, the other to a Gaol.

Trim. This is not for praying to God, but for praying to God without the good leave and licenſe of the Act of Uniformity.

Obſ. E dad, we'le uniform you all, and make you all alike, before we have done; give me bold and hardy Execution, and hang up the mitigating and moderating Councils, and all-heal, or compounding, mollifying Trimmers, abating, ſupplicating, whining, deploring, deſponding Trimmers. Obſ. n. 269.

Trim. But how ſhall we know a Trimmer, a hollow-hearted Trimmer, that loves the Government but only from the teeth outwards?

Obſ. Trimmer thou ſhouldſt not need to ask any ſuch needleſs Queſtions; I have publiſht lately the only true Rule, and infallible, the very teſt of true and conſtant Loyalty.

Trim. I have forgot it, repeat it.

Obſ. Mark me Trimmer, wouldſt thou ſee thine own Face in my Glaſs? then look you, Trimmer, ſee but that leering look of thine when thou lookeſt at me with ſuch ſcorn and neglect: That's my Rule, deſpiſe the Obſervator, and you deſpiſe the Government; deſpiſe the true, loyal, and always conſtant Friends of the Government, and you are Trimmers in the heart of you, deſpiſe honeſt Hodg, and honeſt Nat. and E dad deſpiſe all the World; that has any worth in it, and Learning, and a Man good at any thing, at every thing.

Trim. A very Kich-ſhaw of all Learning, the very Oleo Podrido of Arts, and yet no body minds thee, nor heeds thee.

Obſ. No, E dad, not to reward me, the Rogues will buy up my Obſervations, take Politick-notes, and Divinity-notes too out of them, E dad; Divine and Politick Obſervations to ſave the Kingdom and Souls alſo, and worth a million, and all this for a Penny, a whole ſheet full of Loyalty for a Penny: too cheap in all Conſcience, if it were not to friends, and that the ſafety of the Nation depends upon theſe fingers, and theſe Eagle-ſighted-Eyes in a poor, old, and neglected Obſervator.

Trim. A Nation too that muſt periſh, and come to naught, if the Gout ſhould cramp thoſe as it has done your Toes.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

Obſ. Then you would make us believe that it was not the old Trimmers mitigating, moderating Councils that ruin'd all; but quite contrary, raſh, heady, and precipitate Councils for putting into bold and hardy Execution, the Ceremonies and inventions of ſome Churchmen that would make the Scots conform to them, or they would venture, and run the hazard of having the old Women of Edinborough, and Boys throw ſtools and ſtones at them; and ſo the War firſt begun, that ended not ſo eaſily, and from that Church Hell (firſt) broke looſe.

Trim. I would not make you, nor any body elſe believe any thing, but what woful experience will (however) in time teach you, that God is the King of Conſciences, that to invade Gods Juriſdiction is as unſafe as ſinful; that Hair-brain'd-ſpitfires are the Neſt of the Kingdom, and by their ſanguinary, and precipitate Councils, in maintenance of their own little fopperies, let the King or Kingdom ſink or ſwim, on they would, at all adventures, till they could go no further; and then they ſung another tune, and ſo will you (Mr. Obſervator!) in time, when you have got your Belly-full of Preferments, and alſo your heart full of Curſes, Anathema's, Fines, and Impriſonments, ruine and deſolation, and of the tears of Widows and Orphans, which have a cry.

Obſ. And I muſt tell you (Trimmer!) if it had not been for ſuch bold, and hardy Executions, as I have adviſ'd and obſerv'd, things had not been in ſo fair a way as they are.

Trim. Prethee inſtruct me (then!) for I do not ſee ſuch a fair way as things are in, (at leaſt) nothing to brag on, leaſt of all from your endeavours.

Obſ. Why? Are not the Conventicles rooted? fin'd, ranſom'd; and Priſons fill'd with the wretches?

Trim. And that you call your fair way.

Obſ. I think things go towardly on, and are in a hopeful poſture; ay dad, theſe moderating, mitigating Councils of Trimmers had like to have ſpoil'd all again; Execution, Execution; I cry.

Trim. Have you alwaies cri'd ſo?

Obſ. Yes, ever ſince I underſtood the world, and the true ſeat of intereſt.

Trim. Was that your cry at Lynn-Regis?

Obſ. Ay dad, I am glad you put me in mind of it again, for that piece of Loyalty I was condemn'd to be hang'd by a Court-marſhal (as I have told the world in Print,) and yet, ay dad, here is the man that is (this day) unrewarded (as yet) for that ſervice.

Trim. Oh! you were condemn'd for being an Obſervator, taken as a ſpy, in the Enemies Garriſon.

Obſ. Who knows not that?

Trim. And after Condemnation, you cri'd out, Execution, Execution, a bold, and hardy Execution.

Obſ. Ay dad, but (though I will not give you the lie) I ſay you tell a Whisker.

Trim. Then Execution, Execution has not alwaies been the Word.

Obſ. No, I confeſs there I was miſtaken; but though I would have Sinners, and Tranſgreſſours of the Law Executed, I would not have men hang'd up that are Innocent and Loyal.

Trim. I do not ſay but you might perhaps be (on that occaſion) both Innocent and Loyal, though a man may be Loyal, and yet not Innocent in ſome caſes; as if a Loyal man happen to act againſt the Law of Nature, or Law of Arms, or Law of God, or his Oath in purſuance of Loyalty.

Obſ. There is no Promiſe, nor Oath, nor Faith to be kept with Hereticks.

Trim. So indeed the Council of Conſtance held, and ſo do the Jeſuites now. But in all Wars, one ſide is alwaies the wrong ſide, yet there is ſuch a thing as a Law of Arms, and a Law of Honour, which both the right, and the wrong ſide hold Sacred, for fear (at leaſt) the wrong ſide (as it hapned in your caſe) get ſometimes the longeſt Sword: and it has been thought no diſhonour to take Quarter, no more then to give Quarter, when the long Sword (though the wrong Sword) keeps the Field.

Obſ.

Obſ. A dad, I do not like this giving of Quarter to an enemy.

Trim. No, I ſee you attribute the Wars, and Blood ſhed to theſe mitigating, qualifying, compounding, and moderating Councils; it is giving of Quarter, clearly.

Obſ. Ay dad, I do, and I will (to my dying day) oppoſe mitigation, and moderation.

Trim. You do not know that; for you may be againſt Execution, bold and hardy Execution, yet (once more) before you die.

Obſ. Never, never: ſince my Councils and Obſervations were the Charts we ſteer'd by, we have got the weather-gage, ay dad, and right afore it.

Trim. Plume not your ſelf on that ſcore; for nothing is ſo changeable as the wind.

Obſ. I tell thee, (Trimmer!) my ſteady Councils are firm as a Rock.

Trim. So Dionyſius ſaid, that his Party was ti'd to him with Chains of Adamant; you do not know the world (ſo much as you boaſt of,) if you know not that its affections are more inconſtant then thoſe of Women, its glories fading as beauty, youth or ſtrength; nothing conſtant but unconſtancy on this ſide the Moon; not, that I do not pray againſt all change, nor will I meddle with them that are given to it; but that ſingle inſtance at Lynn-Regis, may alone make you in love with moderating, and mitigating Councils, as long as you live.

Obſ. You could not honour me, nor my memory more then in that ſingle inſtance, the only convincing Evidence of my Loyalty; ay dad, I 'ſcap't fair; I cannot but tremble to think on't yet.

Trim. They were of the wrong ſide that condemn'd you indeed, but you were condemn'd by their Law of Arms; I do not ſay juſtly, but would think the contrary; yet Loyalty is one thing, and Treachery is another; does not all poſterity commend the Roman General that ſent bound a treacherous villain to Pyrrhus, (whom the wretch promiſed to ſlay) ſcorning to be reveng'd of his Enemy by foul play; or if he lov'd the Treaſon, he hated the Traytor? We muſt not do evil, that good may come thereof.

Obſ. Dare you ſay it is evil to ruine Rebels?

Trim. Not by fair War; but Obſervators, or Spies (that come under colour of Friendſhip into an Enemies Camp, have by all Nations been abhor'd, as contrary to the Laws of Arms, and hang'd up immediately.

Obſ. And for that cauſe you think my Loyalty is well enough rewarded, if it compound for the Treachery.

Trim. I ſay, as all men ſay, I love valour in an Enemy, and I hate Treachery in a Friend; for he is not my Friend that conſults not honour; nor can Loyalty be meritorious, if accompanied with baſeneſs, and treachery; who (but a needy wretch) will be a Spy, or Obſervator?

Obſ. Ay dad, I ſhall admire my Sagacity the better as long as I live for this Trick; have I not prophecied right (all along) who it is that ſmote me? Ay dad, I ſee plainly (now) even to demonſtration true it is, that the reaſon why I have not been preferr'd, and advanc't according to my merits, is the whiſpers, and ſly inſinuations of ſuch Trimmers ſuggeſtions, (as this is) which has put a ſpoke in my Ladder, ay dad, that has kept me down, from riſing, thus long; a man of my ſufficiencies, uſefulneſs, and abilities.

Trim. You may be mounted yet before you die.

Obſ. I do not know that; but I know what you mean; And I fear no Colours, I ſcap't narrowly once (though) ay dad; but my learning has been ſo beneficial to the Clergy, that ay dad, they are ingrateful that deny me the benefit of the Clergy, let the worſt come to the worſt.

Trim. But you that have been ſo near the Gallows (already) for being a buſy Obſervator, or Spy, ſhould (by this time) have learnt to be ſo wiſe for your ſelf, as not alwaies to be ſpitting nothing but fire out of your mouth, breathing vengeance, and howling out, Execution, Execution.

Obſ. Ay dad, I do not know but it may be well enough yet; is Loyalty but a name and a word? Is there no ſuch thing?

Trim. Yes, ſure there is ſuch a thing, and one of the beſt things in the world, next to Obedience to Heaven; but, (my friend!) is legality but a word neither? Is Law, Juſtice, and mercy but meer words neither? Is there no ſuch things (think you) in nature? Is all the world rul'd with precipitate, haſty, Heady-Councils, hardy Execution, Paſſion, Violence, Force, and Revenge? You know that we (in England) are not ſo rul'd, nor ever were (long) ſo rul'd: your Predeceſſor (the Obſervator) Tacitus (above 1600 years ago) obſerv'd that Brittany bred men that would obey, and be good Subjects, but were vilely loath to be ſlaves; they would pay legal Taxes, but could not endure dare to be oppreſs; Britannis dilectum ac Tributa & injuncta Imperii munera impigrè obeunt, ſi injuriæ abſint; has ægrè tolerant, jam domiti ut pareant, nondum ut ſerviant: The Roman-valour had tam'd them to Obedience, but could not enſlave them for the hearts of them, do what they could.

CHAP. V.

Obſ. AY dad, but ſome of your Friends (in New-England) were glad to fly for it, as ſome do now, to the Salvage Indians, and the Torrid Zone.

Trim. As the more temperate, and hoſpitable clime of the two, when Pillories, and Anathema's, and Fines, and Jayls, and the High-Commiſſion-Court made old England too hot for them; and this is your Council now.

Obſ. Yes.

Trim. But what were the events of theſe Councils in thoſe days?

Obſ. Ay dad, good luſty fines, &c. and almoſt beggar'd the Rogues.

Trim. And enrich't the King and Kingdom?

Obſ. No, I cannot ſay that; it was thought the contrary, and to make ſuch a damp of Trade, and the Kings Cuſtoms ſo extenuated, and the People generally ſo diſcontented, that the Parliament Mens Pockets (that ſhould have fill'd the Kings empty Exchequer, and paid his vaſt debts) were fill'd rather with grievances, grievances, the loud groans of the People, and cries and lamentations all the Kingdom over. But I am the man that has (now) diſcover'd another way to the wood; would it not be brave to have all Parliament-Men choſen by the King and Court?

Trim. No, It would be ſo far from brave, that it would quite unhinge the Government, and lift it up from its old fundamentals, and foundation, and by ſeeming to advance it higher, ſhake it, and endanger it, and ruine that, which has been a happy ſhelter to the Kings, and Subjects of England, more than any other Kingdom under Heaven.

Obſ. There ſpoke a Trimmer, and yet you love the King, you pretend.

Trim. Let him periſh that loves him not better then thou doſt.

Obſ. What, better then a Tri'd man that never warpt, &c.

Trim. Never (but once) when all the Kingdom warpt.

Obſ. Well; no more of that, I know what you mean, but enough, enough of it.

Trim. Be it ſo; nor had your fawning Sycophantry, and complacence to any thing that is uppermoſt (now) been lain in your diſh, but that you (and ſuch as you) whoſe guilt and ſins makes you tremble to think of a Parliament, an Engliſh-Parliament, choſen by the People (not by the Court) makes ſome ſeem to think of altering the antient Law, and rights of the three Eſtates of this Realm, the very attempt whereof has alwaies been accounted Treaſon, but over Boots, over Shooes; He that knows he muſt be hang'd, cares not which way he mounts the Ladder: if Corporations ſhall have no Officers, nor any to Elect Parliament-men, or to make returns, when they are Elected, but only whom the Court ſhall approve, nominate, or at leaſt confirm; then the third eſtate, and great eſtate of this Realm, in the Money-buſineſs eſpecially, ſhall not (nay) cannot be called longer the Houſe of Commons, but Houſe of Courtiers.

Obſ. E dad, Trimmer, you are a perillous Trimmer I ſee, and would hinder the Loyalty of Corporations from ſurrendring their old Charters for new ones, and better, with only this addition, they ſhall hold their Freedoms and Liberties, quamdiu ſe benè geſſerint, as long as they are good Boys, and chuſe none but whom the Court does approve.

Trim. We have a good and gracious King God grant he may overlive all the Men (now) in England, and from the Policy and bounty of Kings, and time out of mind of man to the contrary, Liberties and Freedoms have been granted to Corporations, and particularly that of chuſing Burgeſſes in Burroughs, ſo that no Hiſtory can trace its original and beginning more than the head of Nile; and all Engliſh-mens rights are ſo confirm'd by Magna Charta, and many other Statutes, that it has alwaies been accounted Treaſon to endeavour the alteration of the fundamental Laws; and no doubt but Juſtice will in time find men out, if they endeavour it, lurk where they will, ſhort-ſighted Projectors are they that would pull down Foundations, and Corner-ſtones, in hopes to ſave their own heads, when it is the neareſt way, and ſhorteſt way (they could take) to Tyburn, if they ſhould run for a Wager.

Obſ. Why? Who endeavours to take away Foundations? Trim.

Trim. All they that (by any means whatsoever) endeavour to make the House of Commons the House of Courtiers.

Why does his sacred Majesty (of blessed memory) so commend the constitution of our well-pois'd Government, above all the nations of the world? saying, That to prevent Anarchy we have a King and House of Lords, to poise and ballance the House of Commons; to prevent Arbitrary Power and Tyranny, we have a House of Lords and House of Commons; and to prevent the worst of Tyrannies (Aristocracy) we have a King and House of Commons: which if turned to a House of Courtiers, where's the poise, where's the Ballance?

Obs. But we have a just and gracious King, that will wrong no man.

Trim. And long may he live and reign; but the King cannot see with his own Eyes every where, but the Law is omniscient and omnipresent in England, or should be so, to decide all Causes, and shelter good Subjects and punish the bad.

Obs. Why? Can any man be a bad Subject that is for the King, or a good Subject that is against him?

Trim. No; It is impossible that a good man can be against the King, or a Rebel; and also impossible that a bad man can be for the King.

Obs. Why, Are not all these Debauchees, Whore-masters, Cursers, Drunkards, Swearers, and Blasphemers, whom we call true Tory-Boys, are not they, I say, for the King?

Trim. No, no; they are the worst Enemies that the Crown of England can possibly have, not only by being open Enemies to God, and consequently pulling down his Wrath, Judgments, and Indignation upon the Kingdom, (no small piece of Treachery) but to gratifie their Lusts and Revenge, are always with their hasty, heady, rash, precipitate and sanguinary Councils, disobliging Mankind, as well as God, Humanity as well as Divinity, with their firm, hardy, and unalterable Determination of Execution, Execution.

Obs. Oh! Your humble Servant, Trimmer, you are not for putting the Laws in Execution against Nonconformists to Uniformity, the Act for Uniformity.

Trim. No; not except it be put in Execution against Tory-Nonconformists, equally, impartially, indifferently and as severely as against Whigg-Nonconformists.

Obs. E dad, it is all one to me; for I am for the Church of England, and am not a Papist of the Church of Rome, nor do I side with that Religion, or so much as meddle with it. Obs. n. 271. Jan. 13. 83.

Trim. We'll do with you herein as with great Travellers, when they tell things scarcely credible, better believe it than go to see; it is not worth the Privy-search; though of the two, it would be for your honour rather to be of the worst Religion, than of none at all; and rather ridicule all sober sense, and the fundamental-Laws, as a well-meaning Papist and Zealot, than (if as a base Hireling) only to provide for your Belly, as you confess. Obs. n. 265. Decemb. 30. 1682.

Obs. E dad, I am for Uniformity.

Trim. I do not concern my self, nor does any wise or sober man concern himself, who or what thou art for, further than to be glad thou art not for his side; for such as you only discredit the cause you would promote, be it never so good.

Obs. I am not for the good old Cause, every body knows that.

Trim. All the better, or rather, more is the pity.

Obs. Why so?

Trim. Because thou wouldst then be a Promoter.

Obs. I hate, and scorn the Office, so inconsistent with a Gentleman, and a Man of Honour.

Trim. I say, thou art a Promoter.

Obs. Bear witness, I wish I had honest Nat. here, or some of his Country-men to bear witness.

Trim. Call whom thou wilt, I say again, thou art a Promoter.

Obs. Of what? You mean Roguishly; do you mean I am a Promoter of close assignations, to bring things and things together, (Anglicè) a Pimp? But, E dad, a Pimp is ten times a better Trade, and a safer Trade, as well as an honester Trade (you think) than a Spy or Observator; no man is hang'd for pimping, but preferred many times the right way, and advanc'd; whereas (commonly) the Gallows takes the last view of a Spy or Observator. A Promoter? I scorn it.

Trim. I say again, Thou art a Promoter.

Obs. Of what?

Trim. Of the good Old Cause.

Obs. I gave thee the Lye just now, after another great example in Print; and E dad again, God forgive me, I was just going to swear you lye.

Trim. By my truly, you could not promote the good Old cause more (if you would hang your your self, than by appearing against it, though the favour merits no thanks from the Non-con's, nor blame from the Con's, because you meant it not. Do men gather Grapes of Thorns? Nor can they expect any good from an old weather-beaten Weather-cock, an old any thing, an old every thing but what is vertuous, an old goatish, and therefore goutish, Ob-

Obs. n. 255. servator? That (as you say) Dec. 30. 1682. 'Because the Observator has got the Pox in 'his Bones, therefore the Devil is in the Trimmers, (or the good old Cause, you might have 'added,) why, thou canst not live without teasing something or other: And every Twinge 'in your Toe breeds a Maggot in your Head: 'Tis the very humour of the damn'd to re-'venge the fire in their own Tails, upon any thing that's next them.

Obs. Those are my own words, I taught you Satyr.

Trim. I durst not otherwise, Nay I would not however otherwise have made so bold, as to judg and censure what might be the cause of your Gout, for I do not think the Poet a true Prophet when he said,

As Gout in Age from Pox in Youth proceeds,
As Wenching past, then jealousie succeeds:
The worst Disease that Love and Wenching breeds.

CHAP. VI.

Obs. WEl, then come on Trimmer, since you are so bold as, of your own mettal and accord, thus to come into the Ring, and into the Lists with me, why dost thou not answer my Challenge?

Trim. You have made so many Challenges, and sent them to the Trimmers publickly, weekly, and sometimes daily, throwing down your Gage in every Coffee-House, that I know not which of them I should first take up.

Obs. n. 271. Obs. I mean, then, my last bold Challenge to thee, sent out, Jan. 13. 1682. Answer me before we part; What's become of all the Actions against the late Lord Mayor, for usurping upon the Rights of the City? And how goes it with the new Sheriffs? Did those of the last year quietly give up possession? Did the Prisoners refuse to plead or no? How were things carried upon the Scrutiny? What became of Kid's Action against Capt. Broomer, and the Jesuited Janizaries that beat up the Conventicle in Exchange-Alley? And how came Coll. Quiney's business off?

Trim. Would you have distinct Answers to each?

Obs. No, that's needless, answer them by lump, for they are all of a lump, and therefore I have bound them up together-----

Trim. And in gross, gross enough.

Obs. But what hast thou to say to them Trimmer, or what darest thou say to them?

Trim. This is your way, first to challenge a man, but then (to make all sure) tye up his hands; shall I have equal Liberty, and fair play?

Obs. God forbid else; Justice and Honour pleads for you, that you should have as much liberty to answer my Questions, as I to propound them.

Trim. Then you will not first challenge me to a dispute, and to make all sure of your side, gagg me.

Obs. I scorn it, I am more a Gentleman, and a Scholar.

Trim. Still for all this, I am a little jealous of thee, and fearful; For thou hast got the weather-gage, and therefore you insult so, huff, challenge, and vapour, knowing whoever encounters thee to Lee-ward, his own Powder and smoak flashes in his face.

Obs. I'le wave the odds, come on boldly.

Trim. It is not in your Power to stemm the Tide, nor change the Wind, nor to make it blow indifferent, and with a side-wind, equal to both sides, and therefore I'le only say, what an awse art thou to put the question? How came the late Lord Mayor, the new Sheriffs, the Scrutiny, Broomer, the Jesuitical Janizaries, and Quiney, how came they off? Saist thou, most insultingly; when it is well known that their great Cause never yet came on, never hitherto has been under legal consideration, much less legal determination, and sentence: what rewards or punishments they merit, concerns not a busie Observator; and for my part, I am bred to more modesty, than to meddle with so matchless and stupenduous a matter, matter that no Englisb Hiſtory can parallel it in times of Peace. Prethee therefore let us leave it and them, to legal Tryal, and the Deciſion of the Laws.

And ſince you are ſo bold to ask queſtions, give me leave to ask thee ſome.

Obſ. With all my heart, it is but juſt and equal.

Trim. Then what deſerve they that by confederacy commit a Rape upon a Virgin, a Sacred Virgin, a Veſtal?

Obſ. An Halter; every Mothers Son of them, there's a wiſe queſtion, who knows not that? Tis like the wit of a Trimmer.

Trim. What deſerve they that commit a rape, or attempt to commit a Rape upon a Widdow?

Obſ. Oh! ho! I begin to underſtumble you; E dad, I will not tell you.

Trim. Neither tell I thee what they deſerve that commit a Rape upon the Sacred Laws, that Raviſh mens rights, and civil liberties with the Sword, and offer violence to the Law.

Obſ. Why? Who did? If I knew of any ſuch Monſters, I would ſay, hanging is too good for them; for, as the Romans (who had made no Proviſion in Law againſt Parricide) were at a loſs for an equal puniſhment, when a Villain (once) kill'd his Father, the Author of his own life and being, perſwading themſelves that the world could never produce a Monſter of ſuch a Ghaſtly, and unnatural ſize, ſuch a Prodigy, and By-blow in nature; even ſo, to violate the Sacred Laws with force, and a long Sword in time of Peace, without declaring Hoſtility againſt the Laws, from whom we have our life, our beings, our well-beings, liberties, protection, eſtates and birthrights continued and derived to us, is ſo prodigious a Crime, that no puniſhment in this world can poſſibly equal it; that a few men ſhould by force (which yet is moſt eaſy in quiet times) cut the banks and boundaries of Laws and Societies, is more prodigious from its cauſe and effects, then from the Act it ſelf; any Boy, any Eroſtratus may burn the Sacred Temple, (as he did that of Diana) a goodly fabrick, as any in the world, the wonder is (firſt) in the cauſe, (that ever ſo much villany ſhould enter into mortal breaſt, and upon what temptation,) and (ſecondly) that ſo weak, and contemptible a Creature could produce ſuch diſmal effects; but what Eroſtratus's do you mean? How do you apply this diſcourſe?

Trim. It needs no application; for I am only ſpeaking of puniſhments due to thoſe that commit a Rape upon Widdows, or the Sacred Laws.

Obſ. Why? Who did?

Trim. Who ſaies who? Does your Conſcience, or any mans Conſcience accuſe him?

Obſ. Not in the leaſt.

Trim. Then ſit you merry.

Obſ. You cannot mean it of me, or Quiney, &c.

Trim. Why ſhould you or any man elſe that is innocent ask ſuch a frivilous queſtion? If I ſay, he that commits a Rape, deſerves to be hang'd, will you be offended?

Obſ. No; I am not concern'd.

Trim. Then how impertinent art thou to ſay, do you mean me, or Quiney? Eſpecially ſince (quite contrary) inſtead of puniſhment for any Crime, the late Lord Mayor, new Sheriffs, Broomer, Jeſuited Janizaries (none but a friend durſt have call'd them ſo, Jeſuited Janizaries?) and Quiney have had thanks for their pains.

Obſ. By ſome that were as deep in the dirt as they in the mire; you would ſay.

Trim. What? You do lie upon the catch, do you? If you do; all the Company can teſtify, that I never ſaid that any body elſe gave them thanks, or that they (that did give them thanks) had not cauſe to do ſo.

For, (even) Aſſes know when they are overloaded unconſcionably, and more then they are able to bear, and therefore beat them, till your hearts ake, and your Cudgels break, they'le not ſtir a foot, when overburthen'd out of all reaſon, and meaſure.

Obſ. I tell thee Trimmer, ſince you ſeem ſhy, and wary, chary, and fearful to diſcourſe of that great buſineſs of the late Lord Mayor, new Sheriffs, Jeſuited Janizaries, ——— and Quiney; yet it was a buſineſs (then which) nothing is more diſcours'd of (mutteringly) at this day; and, (indeed) which more ſticks on ſome mens ſtomachs! Indeed it was a great buſineſs, but E dad, it was neceſſary, there was no other way to bring things to ſo fair a paſs as now they are; it was the very hinge of affairs, when things ſtood tottering in equal Ballance, and whether for a Penny, then came Quiney with his Hand and Sword (which weigh'd juſt a pound) and turn'd the Scales.

Trim. It was boldly done.

Obſ. E dad it was, and moſt courageouſly, the ſlaves never durſt mutter ſince, nor ſcarce ſay muff; and have we not carried it ever ſince in Courts, in Sheriffs, in Juries, in every thing, ay and in Execution, Execution.

Trim. And ſo you won, becauſe you bowl'd alone.

Obſ. E dad, we carry the Goal, We got the Ball, took it, and run ſhear away with it.

Trim. Nay, you have loſt your old wont clſe (Tory;) for ever ſince I firſt knew you, all the world can witneſs that you were as good (or better) at your Heels than your Hands: But away with your provocations to this diſcourſe, I am ſick on't; Therefore, to put you out of it, prethee tell me, how does thy Feet, Heels, and Toes?

Obſ. Ay dad, like my ſelf, worſe and worſe this cold weather and hard times. But away with this diſcourſe, I like it not.

Trim. It is of your own raiſing, I will make no occaſions, it is you that firſt mentioned Quiney's buſineſs.

Obſ. E dad, That buſineſs has done ſome peoples buſineſs for evermore.

Trim. And a day longer.

Obſ. It was an Heroick Act: Alexander cut the ſacred Gordian-knot with his Sword, which none but ſacred Hands did tie, nor could unlooſe.

Trim. Quiney's Act was a matchleſs Act, no ſtory can parallel it; for Alexander did it in time of War.

Obſ. Time of War, or time of Peace: Tell not me; it was a neceſſary buſineſs, neceſſary to the Cities Peace, and Kingdoms Peace, and to prevent Riots and Tumults, by way of prevention, E dad, and preoccupation.

Trim. Do you think that the beſt way to prevent tumults in Weſtminſter-Hall is to fill it with Souldiers, and awe the Judges, and do them violence?

Obſ. I do not know what to ſay to that.

Trim. Raſh men in a ſtorm leap into the Sea for fear of drowning, notable policy! Thus Gondamar (the Spaniſh Ambaſſadour) moſt politically would have perſuaded King James to cut off Sir Walter Rawleigh's Head, (a Head that would have become the beſt Shoulders in Spain) by way of Prevention and timely foreſight, before he went to Guiana, proving the juſtice of the Policy from a ſtory of a Woman, that whipt her Daughter beforehand, leſt ſhe ſhould break the Pitcher. Oh rich! Do but you hang up the firſt man you meet, for fear he ſhould ſteal your Horſe, by way of prevention, and I'le ſecure you he ſhall never ſteal him. It is the very policy of Herod, who was ſo circumſpectly provident, that he killed all the male Children of Bethlehem to ſecure himſelf from a King of Gods making.

Obſ. Trimmer, Trimmer, Neceſſity has no Law.

Trim. Nobs, Nobs, This was the old Plea for Ship-Money, and other illegal Taxes and Oppreſſions, afterwards condemned by King Charles the Firſt, and his Parliament; becauſe (quoth ſome) the Crown could not want them, it was ſo poor and neceſſitous; which aggravated their Crimes, that by their buzzing at Court kept off Parliaments Twelve long years, thereby keeping up a miſ-underſtanding and bad Intelligence, for want of that due and uſual Correſpondence betwixt the King and his People in the old fundamental way of Parliaments, whereby the Exchequer was brought into ſtraits and neceſſities, borrowing (I have cauſe to ſay) what was never paid to this day: And to expiate ſuch Crimes, they brought Mr. Neceſſity (a Son of their own begetting, and the ſpurious Iſſue of their Luſts) to vouch them; and what was the Iſſue? Did it not at length aggravate their puniſhments as well as their Crimes, if you mark the end on't?

Obſ. That was in the late Inteſtine Wars: Thoſe days are done.

Trim. And I truſt in God they will never return; and that they may never return, the ſureſt way (as well as the beſt way) is to get out of the dirty and fatal Road (as faſt as may be) which leads to ſuch diſmal Ends and Ruines, abſtaining from all violation of the ſacred Laws, and illegal Rapes, which (like that of the chaſte Lucrece) occaſioned the Civil-Wars at Rome, to the Ruine of the Kingdom. He that uſes a Sword in a Court of Juſtice, muſt throw away the Scabbard; for Hell breaks looſe (many times) like the Sea (when the banks are cut,) (an eaſie matter to perform in times of quiet by a few hands;) the boundaries which the Laws have ſet are eaſily violated, but then, all Hands together are ſcarce able to ſtop the Breach, and prevent an univerſal Deluge.

Obſ. But what's all this to my Queſtion, how Quiney and the reſt came off?

Trim. I told thee before I would not meddle with them, and therefore I have nothing at all to ſay to them, but what you ſaid to Madam Trimmer, Have me recommended to them, and tell them we all Provide for the Belly.

Obſ.

Obſ. I (amongſt others) am greedy enough of the Bait, but (you adviſe me to) have a care of the hook.

Trim. He that's undone is out of Fortune's Power;
They that lie low as Earth can fall no lower.

Obſ. There is no Remedy: The word is gone out from me: Ipſe dixi: (πολλῶν ἀπέξιο ἀλλῶν) The Sentence is paſt. There is no other way left but EXECUTION, EXECUTION, WITH A FIRM, HARDY, AND UNALTERABLE DETERMINATION.

Trim. And leſt ſo portentous a ſentence ſhould eſcape admiration, you print it in great (you ſhould not need) Capital Letters: Let it be writ upon your Tomb. Obſ. n. 269.

For as you live in the ready Road from Newgate to Tyburn, ſo alſo if your Tomb happen to be within a mile of the Gallows, no Epitaph can be more proper for you, nor more immortallize your name to Poſterity, than EXECUTION, EXECUTION, WITH A FIRM, HARDY, AND UNALTERABLE DETERMINATION.

It is the very Quinteſſence of Devilry; for no Mortal in his own confidence, could have ſaid it; he muſt be more than man that could be ſo far diveſted of all Humanity; or was the Devil in you?

If you had lived 1600 years agoe, what a happy Tutor might you have been (Mr. Nobs,) to the Roman Government, as well as now to ours! what an Obſervator has Nero and Caligula loſt (dull Truants in Execution,) they might have gone to School to thee, Nobs: For they alſo ſcorned all moderation, mitigation, qualifications, abatements, promiſes, undertakings, importunings, relentings, repentings, ſupplications, prayers or tears, whinings and deplorings; ſcorning alſo all diminutive and Retail-Executions, and leſt their humanity ſhould have time to wamble in their bowels, wiſhing that Rome had but one common Neck, that one blow might diſpatch the Execution, Execution, with a firm, hardy, and unalterable determination. If Lions, Bears, Vultures, Serpents, Dogs, Towzers, Foxes, Cats, Tygers, Aſſes, Bulls or Wolves, had never been ſeen on earth, yet that there are ſuch Beaſts might eaſily be gathered from their brutiſh natures ſo viſible and apparent in beaſtly men, roaring, rending, tearing, hiſſing, biting, barking, ſnapping, clawing, devouring, braying, bellowing, and howling in brutiſh men, their counter-part: And if we had no other Arguments that there are Devils, yet are their natures (even to demonſtration) evident, their Devilry being ſo viſible in deviliſh men, their true counterfeit and Charter-part. Which made Cicero (though a Heathen) ſay to a prodigious Wretch, a very monſter of a man, for miſchief and Execution, with a firm, hardy, and unalterable determination, Multa ſed & dæmon tibi ſuggerit.

Multa quidem ipſe,
Some Crimes come from ſome Dæmon, or ſome Elf,
Some from no other Devil than thy ſelf.

Much of thy wickedneſs comes from thine own villanous heart (ſaith Cicero) but much alſo the Devil taught thee; Execution, Execution (quoth he) with a firm, hardy, and unalterable determination. This Wiſdom comes not from above, but is earthy, ſenſual, deviliſh; a few more ſuch Phaetons, ſuch Eroſtratuſſes, ſuch Spitfires are enough to anticipate Dooms-day, by ſetting the world on fire, and to ruine themſelves too in the common Flame.
